What does a positive result mean?

If you have a positive test result, it is very likely that you have COVID-19 because proteins from the virus that causes COVID-19 were found in your sample. If you test positive and your symptoms worsen, you should contact your primary Care Provider for further instructions. You should self-quarantine to avoid spreading the virus to others. Self-quarantining means voluntarily separating yourself from others as much as possible by staying home. It also includes self-monitoring of your symptoms, including regular temperature checks and watching for signs of a respiratory illness, such as shortness of breath, cough and fever.

What does a negative result mean?

A negative test result means that proteins from the virus that causes COVID-19 were not found in your sample. It is possible for this test to give a negative result that is incorrect (false negative) in some people with COVID-19. This means that you could possibly still have COVID-19 even though the test is negative. If your test result is negative, but you or your provider have a heightened concern that you may have COVID-19 your provider may direct you for further testing.

The most up-to-date information on COVID-19 is available at the CDC general webpage: https:// www.cdc.gov/COVID19. In addition, please also contact your healthcare provider with any questions/ concerns.
